ENACTUS PROJECT IMPACT

At Enactus Nottingham, the team has opened a social supermarket for people in need of affordable food. They collect food that would otherwise go to waste and sell it at heavily discounted rates and provide food to support breakfast clubs in local schools.

At Enactus Edinburgh, the team is empowering local women in Malawi with entrepreneurial skills and teaching them how to make and sell soap which is also being used to effectively combat mosquito born diseases such as Malaria.

At Enactus Exeter, the team is tackling one of the biggest contributors to the food waste problem, by using coffee grounds to grow gourmet mushrooms, which are then sold in the local community and supports local unemployed people to gain work experience.

At Enactus Warwick, the team is creating sunglasses and blue light glasses out of 100% recycled plastic. This is collected by local rag pickers in India, supporting them to gain an income and improve their quality of life.

ENACTUS STUDENT IMPACT

"Enactus was one of the activities that defined my university experience. My engagement with Enactus throughout last year helped me develop an interest in business, learn how to work hard on projects, develop sales and interview skills and learn how to work better in a team. I felt more confident knowing the challenges I've overcome as part of Enactus."

Denislav - Team Leader, Enactus Sheffield Hallam

"Enactus provides the chance to place yourself in business environments amongst the individuals that are striving to make positive impact in the world. Within this environment are countless opportunities to build skills, broaden your perspective, and fine-tune your interests"

Meghan - Team Leader, Enactus Edinburgh

"Being in charge of a team meant I had to be organised and I became more proactive in the way I work. Planning and coming up with new concepts within Enactus and managing people has definitely helped me to become much more confident and comfortable handling new situations."

Laura - Marketing Leader, Enactus Plymouth
